DISCLOSURE NOTICE

Pursuant to the Gramm-Leach-Bliley Act, Public Law Number 106-102, and the rule issued by the Federal Trade Commission regarding the Privacy of Consumer Financial Information, 16 Code of Federal Regulations Part 313, law firms which provide tax preparation and tax planning services to their clients are categorized as financial service providers and required to provide written notices to certain clients regarding disclosure of non-public personal information.

As your attorney, I collect non-public information about you from you, and with your authorization, from third parties such as accountants, financial advisors, insurance agents, banking institutions, and other advisors. I do not disclose any non-public personal information about our clients or former clients to anyone except as permitted by law, or as authorized by you.

If I am authorized by you, I may disclose non-public information to unrelated third parties. Such unrelated third parties would include accountants, financial advisors, insurance agents, or government authorities in connection with any tax returns prepared by me, or tax planning. I restrict access to non-public personal information about you to those employees of my law firm who need to know the information in order to provide legal services to you. I maintain physical, electronic, and procedural safeguards that comply with Federal Regulations and my rules of ethics to guard your non-public personal information.

ATTORNEY-CLIENT PRIVILEGE

While the foregoing federal laws and regulations establish rules and disclosure requirements, they do not limit the attorney-client privilege or the confidentiality rules for information provided to attorneys. The privilege and confidentiality rules are governed by state law, the rules imposed on attorneys under state law and our ethics standards. In circumstances where applicable federal laws might allow disclosure, I will continue to follow the stricter non-disclosure rules of attorney-client privilege and client confidentiality.
